IF IT ISN'T TRUE IT OUGHT TO BE!

- * Duke & Snot to open fast food chain under same name
- * Laundry facilities to be placed in campground.
- * Minnesota mosquitoes suspected of carrying strange new plague which causes uncontrollable quotations from Monty Python's Holy Grail and is called Pythonus Greiks Repeatus.
- * Formerly passive feline reverts to savage beast attacking pieces of lace distressing seamstresses and causing much chagrin.
- * sources have revealed that Gorbachov spent his missing week here and was spotted in the campground roasting hotdogs, drinking vodka and was overheard saying "No really, a cat ate my pass."
- * Word has reached us that fire ants have established a strong foothold in southern Colorado

Crown Jewels Stolen

Pa.
Free

The Crown Jewels were stolen this weekend from Folkstone Hall. An eyewitness reported that the theft occurred in broad daylight and that the display case was not only locked, but closely watched by the Royal Guard. As the alarm was sounded and the guard's scrambled to search for clues, the Jewels were skillfully returned without detection thus hampering investigators. His Majesty has Executed disciplinary action among the ranks of the Royal Guard.

Lochness Monster Sighted In Robin Hood's Pond

"Nessie", the famed serpent of Loch Ness was reportedly seen late Saturday night in the pond of Robin Hood Stage. The monster has been described as large and dark green with a scaly complexion and somewhat resembling a 1968 Cadillac. Local Robin Hood resident, Syd the Squid has not been seen since the sighting. Fears for his well being have been expressed.

Oak Tree Stolen

a very large and greatly admired oak tree was mysteriously uprooted and stolen from the area of Bad Manor. Beavers in the area are being sought for questioning.

WEEKEND REPORT

Over 20,000 enthusiastic patrons swarmed the gates Saturday as the temperature rose above 90 degrees. One over-indulgent patron remarked, upon seeing the living chess match field, "Look, a full contact twister board!" More than 15,000 showed up Sunday despite morning rains to enjoy the humidity. Reports have come in that the Jester staged a raid on Bad Manor backed by children with swords and shields only to find the building empty. Better luck next time guys.

Hey, does everyone remember before the world was a great place to live; before the Skies were clean, and we lived in harmony with the animal, who scampered through lush unthinned forests. Remember, when we all started using natural energy resources, that didn't pollute our world, and we laughed at those old oil guzzling cars and dirty nuclear power plants. Remember, when we decided that war solved nothing and only through honest, sincere compromise could we solve problems; that's when we stopped noticing skin color, and religious differences and we started looking inside ourselves and others. Remember, how we threw all our weapons away, and stopped making weapons of mass destruction. We decided it was better to get along, than to fight or argue. Remember, when we started to feed and clean the world rather than spend money on worthless items; that greedy companies tried to pass off as necessities on television. Speaking of T.V. remember when we started using it as a tool to educate rather than as an alter. We stopped supporting companies more concerned with taking our last dollar, than protecting us or our environment. Remember, when we learned what "We the people..." really meant and we got involved and decided, what was really best for us and stopped allowing an indifferent, corrupt government to make our decisions; and we held our elected officials accountable for their actions. Surely, you haven't forgotten how we took responsibility for our selves and we thought about the future and what we were leaving behind for upcoming generations. We stopped being selfish and self-centered and got together one night a week to share food and fun, and discuss what we wanted, and strove to save today and insure the future, AND WE WERE A WORLD UNIFIED. REMEMBER?... No... Funny neither do I; LET'S HOPE OUR CHILDREN DO!

... THE DREAM ...

Reprint from
Vol. 5 #7
Scarborough
FAIRE

There lives a dream. It is a very old dream, the oldest parts are just images and feelings. I have experienced fractions of my part in it. I lose sight of it at times. Sometimes I recognize parts of the dream in the words and pictures of others. I wonder how widely people experience it.

The dream seems to have different effects on different people. To some it brings peace, to others anguish. Some try to merge their lives with it. Some try to ignore it. Some discover many others who feel they have experienced a part of the dream. Some live their lives never sharing the dream with anyone.

Everyone's part in the dream is different, such that two people might discuss or enact interpretations of the dream and never know it is the same dream. The more I dream this dream, however, the more I recognize it in the expressions of others. I'll tell you some of the things I've dreamed—I long to hear your parts of the dream.

I dream of love. I dream of awareness. I dream of God. I dream of intimacy. For fun I dream of flying. In my dreams I am many things. In my dreams I know that I am not dreaming.
